Washington's Farewell Address

NEW YEAR LEVEE

President Washington's Reception at the White House.

Friendly Greetings of Citizens, it is Recorded, Greatly Pleased the First Chief Executive.

"In the Republican Court," a volume published in 1854 by D. Appleton & Company dealing with the administration of Washington, appears the following interesting description of New Year's activities of 1790, and particularly the manner of observing New Year's at the White House, where Martha Washington, the ever-considerate spouse, dismissed her guests at 9 o'clock in order that her "general's" slumber might not be interfered with:

The winter of 1789-90 was warmer than any which the oldest inhabitants could remember. In the last week of December and the first of January gardeners and farmers on the island of Manhattan were plowing, and women appeared in the streets of the city in their summer dresses. The pleasant custom of making New Year's calls had long obtained in most of the countries of continental Europe, and it was brought to New York by both the Dutch and the Huguenots, who had preserved it as one of their peculiar institutions, which never could be naturalized in towns of a more purely English origin and population.

On Friday, the first of January, 1790, we are informed by the late venerable John Pintard, who was then a young man of fashion, and a close observer, the President was waited upon by the principal gentlemen of the metropolis. The day was uncommonly mild and agreeable, even for that year of perpetual verdure, and the great festival of friendship was never kept more universally or with a livelier gratification. The visitors of the President, after an interchange of the usual salutations of the day, withdrew, delighted at his gracious manner.

Washington's Stately Bearing. It is not known, though Mr. Pintard assures us that a majority of them were personally unacquainted with him, that there were any to complain of such a stately bearing as about this time alarmed a sagacious colonel from Virginia for the safety of the republic. This colonel had traveled, and after attending one of the receptions of the President at the White House, he wrote Gov. Beverly Randolph, in Richmond, that "his bows were more distant and stiff" than any he had seen at St. James's. A correspondent informed Washington of the fearful apprehensions thus awakened, and he replied, "That I have not been able to make bows to the taste of poor Colonel Blank, who, by the way, I believe, never saw but one of them, is to be regretted; especially as, upon that occasion, they were indiscriminately bestowed and the best I was master of. Would it not have been better to throw the veil of charity over them, ascribing their stiffness to the effects of age, or to the unskillfulness of my teacher,

Martha Washington as She Appeared in 1790. (From an Old Engraving.)

rather than to pride and dignity of office?"

Mrs. Washington's Levee.

Mrs. Washington held her levee, as on other Friday evenings, but on no previous occasion had one been graced with so much respectability and elegance. The air was almost as gentle as it should be in May, and the full moon shone so brightly that the streets to a late hour were filled with a delicious twilight. It was not the custom for visitors of the President to sit, but it appears from Mr. Pintard's diary that, on this night, at least, there were chairs in the rooms where Mrs. Washington saw her guests, for "after they were seated, tea and coffee, and plum and plain cake, were dispensed by the attending servants. She remarked, while speaking of the day's occurrences, that none of them had so pleased the general (by which title she always designated her husband) as the friendly greetings of the gentlemen who called upon him at noon.

To an inquiry by the President whether such observances were casual or customary, it was answered that New Year's visiting had always been maintained in the city. He paused a moment, and then observed: "The highly favored situation of New York will, in the process of years, attract numerous emigrants, who will gradually change its ancient customs and manners; but, whatever changes take place, never forget the cordial and cheerful observance of New Year's day."

Mrs. Washington had stood by his side as the visitors arrived and were presented, and when the clock in the hall was heard striking 9, she advanced, and with a complacent smile said, "The general always retires at 9, and I usually precede him;" upon which all arose, made their parting salutations, and withdrew.

TREASURE COMMON TO ALL

Fame and Character of Washington Honored in All the Countries of the Earth.

Webster, this nation's greatest orator, said:

"Inspiring auspices, this day, surround us and cheer us. It is the anniversary of the birth of Washington. We should know this, even if we had lost our calendars, for we should be reminded of it by the shouts of joy and gladness. The whole atmosphere is redolent of his name; hills and forests, rocks and rivers, echo and re-echo his praises.

"All the good, whether learned or unlearned, high or low, rich or poor, feel, this day, that there is one treasure common to them all, and that is the fame and character of Washington. They recount his deeds, ponder over his principles and teachings, and resolve to be more and more guided by them in the future."

ILLINOIS State News

Vermilion county officials are looking to the State Supreme court this month for a ruling on the validity of their 21-cent special hard-road tax, which the Toledo, St. Louis & Western railroad declared illegal. In rebelling against the tax the railroad claimed that the treasurer of Vermilion county had no authority to collect the special 21-cent tax in addition to the 50-cent general county tax levy. Counsel for the treasurer established their case behind the result of a special election in which the people of Vermilion county voted an assessment of not to exceed 75 cents for hard-road construction. The entire tax, county and special, these attorneys contended, is only 71 cents. Vermilion county issued $1,500,000 in bonds, relying upon the 21-cent tax to pay the matured bonds and interest.

Makes a Bright Spot in Every Home. A Comfort in Years to Come

Park Rapids, Minnesota.—"I have taken your medicine—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—when I was a girl for pains and before and after my marriage. I now have a sweet little baby boy and will send you his picture if you wish to publish it. My sisters also take your medicine and find it a great help, and I recommend it to those who suffer before their babies are born."

Mrs. Wm. Johnson, Box 155, Park Rapids, Minn.

To marry and arrive at middle age without children is a great disappointment to many women. Think of the joy and comfort other women have in their children as they grow older.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped to bring great happiness to many families by restoring women to health. Often the childless home is due to a run down condition of the wife, which may be helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. It brought health and happiness into the home of Mrs. Johnson. Why not to yours?

BOY SCOUTS

(Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America.)

WINS HIKING MERIT BADGE

Rodney Hotchkiss is the first scout in Binghamton to win the hiking merit badge. To earn this badge the boy must meet the following tests:

1. Show a thorough knowledge of the care of the feet on a hike.

2. Shall walk five miles per day, six days in the week, for a period of three months. This may include walking to and from school or work. He shall keep a record of his hikes daily, preferably in his diary, a transcript to be made an exhibit before the court of honor.

3. Walk ten miles on each of ten days in each month for a period of three months; in other words, six weeks of ten miles during the three months.

4. Walk 20 miles in one day.

5. Locate and describe interesting trails and walk to some place marked by some patriotic or historical event.

6. Write his experience in these several walking trips with reference to fatigue or distress experienced, and indicate what he has learned in the way of caring for himself as regards equipment, such as camping and cooking outfit, food, footwear, clothing and hygiene.

7. He shall review his ability to read a road map (preferably a government topographical map), to use a compass, and shall be required to make a written plan for a hike from the map.

Francis Lake of Troop 6, Binghamton was made an Eagle scout at the same court of honor session at which the hiking merit badge was conferred on Scout Hotchkiss, who is already an Eagle.

SCOUT TRACKS OWN BICYCLE

Bruce E. Cox, a thirteen-year-old boy scout of Detroit, woke up one morning to find his beloved bicycle missing. A scout knows how to "track and trail," and having first notified the police of the theft, young Cox set out to recover the property. He found the track of the wheel in the moist earth near the garage. Found also a man's-sized footprint. The footprints disappeared in the alley. Deduction No. 2: At this point the man-sized person began to ride the wheel. For two blocks the amateur Sherlock Holmes traced the bicycle tracks. At the door of the private garage the tracks stopped. Inquiry of the owner: "Anyone put a bicycle in your garage?" "Why, yes," was the answer. "Yesterday a D. P. W. workman asked if he could store some tools here and today he left a bicycle." It was easy enough to prove the real owner's claim to the wheel. They are still looking for the thief, but Bruce doesn't care whether they find him or not. He has the bicycle, thanks to his own keen mother wit and scout training.

A FIRST-CLASS TROOP

Troop 1 of Westboro, Mass., has none but first-class scouts in its membership of 25 boys. Five of these are also Star scouts. The troop had the honor of being awarded the silver cup conferred by the Algonquin council for all-round efficiency in scouting and has been granted permission by the governors of the local country club to establish within the limits of the club property a bird life sanctuary and haven for wild life generally. The territory included covers about 50 acres. The sanctuary project has the sanction of the state department of conservation under the direction of which it will be carried out. This troop is also one of the successful "paggers," having recently been successful in finding a young man, who, temporarily insane, had wandered away from home and baffled the efforts of the police to locate him.

CALIFORNIA GOOD TURNS

A scout on duty at the California Industries exposition, noticed that some temporary wiring in the Civic auditorium looked hot. Touching it gingerly he found it was quite as hot as it looked. He reported the matter and an examination proved that the wires were overloaded. The trouble was repaired and damage avoided. Two San Francisco scouts put out a fire in an apartment house. In the same city a lady driving up a steep hill discovering that the car had engine trouble got out to investigate. The car began to roll down hill. A passing scout jumped in, put on the brakes and stopped the machine.

PAGE LOST CHILDREN

Pasadena boy scouts were, not long ago, called out in answer to a hurry call to find three missing maidens, all under five years of age, who had simultaneously and unaccountably disappeared. At the end of an hour one of the 20 scouts who were on the quest, discovered the three young ladies being entertained at a school cafeteria, a mile from their homes, while the teachers vainly tried to learn their guests' names and addresses.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

by MARY GRAHAM BONNER

PENGUINS ONCE MORE

"I have just one more story I want to tell you of the penguins," said Daddy, and then I think I won't tell any more penguin stories for a long time."

"We've loved hearing about them, Daddy," said Nancy, "and when we've told a number of our friends what we knew about them they have liked hearing about them, too. So I do believe the penguins are popular."

"Pick My Steps." "And they're such wonderful looking creatures," said Nick, "the way they can walk along like little men, and yet they swim with their wings and are called birds!"

"I hope some day to go to New Zealand and some of the other out-of-the-way parts of the world and see them for myself!"

"Well, just one more story about them, then," said Daddy, "and then I really think we'd better not have any more penguin stories for a good long time, for there might be some friends who didn't care for penguin stories, and they'd rather have more of other kinds."

"Well, anyway, I must tell you about young Master Johnny Penguin and his brother when they were about to change their down."

"At the end of January they had left the nests, but still had been guarded over by their parents and had wanted to have their parents feed them and look after them as much as possible."

"They still were quite timid."

"They then wear their soft gray and white downy suits and about the first of February they begin to molt and show the feathers which had been growing underneath. They show white spots on their heads."

"Off comes the down, and the last of it to go is from the back of the head and the neck and shoulders."

"Their parents hadn't begun to molt as yet, though their feathers were beginning to look quite shabby and they were plainly in need of new clothes."

"They were going about, using their tails as props, as they always did, and were doing all they still could about feeding the young."

"For a time, when the older ones are molting, they change their new feathers and have orange feet, or orange boots, of which they are very proud and which they consider very handsome."

"The inner part of their wings, which have been pink during the time when they were thinking about the eggs to be hatched out, become white now."

"They were all as curious as ever, looking at everything they found and wondering what it could be and picking up odds and ends to see what they might be, not dropping them until they had satisfied their curiosity."

"Now," said young Master Johnny Penguin, "I shall try to be like my parents. I shall sleep a great deal and when I awaken from a nap I shall see that I am looking quite neat and all."

"I shall preen my feathers and do my best to look my best!"

"And when I walk I shall pick my steps carefully, taking steps high in the air, holding my tail high above the ground and balancing as I go along with my wings."

"I shall swim well, going along quickly, and I shall now and again bring my head out of the water for a breath of air, and then I'll go down again quickly."

"When I'm out on land I'll sometimes hop from one stone to another, as my cousin, the Rock-Hopper penguin, does."

"And when I am frightened I will get down on all fours and toboggan along."

"And when I have nothing special to do and no one is bothering me when I'm going marketing or returning home from my marketing, I'll go along, paying attention to nobody, as my parents do."

"That is the way to talk," the parents of young Master Johnny Penguin said, "but it will be better yet when you act that way, for actions, folks say, speak louder than words!"

"And when men from other places visit us here, let them stroke our backs, for it is the most pleasant thing in the world, and they do it so very, very well!"

Love Finds a Way.

The man and the bride were among the 50 or so men and brides awaiting their turn at the marriage bureau in the municipal building.

"I'm half a dollar short," said the man to the city official who receives the $2 fee. "What'll I do?"

"Sorry I can't help you out, buddy," was the answer, "but the law doesn't permit any rate cutting. You'll have to get the money somehow."

An hour later the man and the bride were back. They had the required $2.

"Where'd you get it?" inquired the city officer. "Borrow from friends?"

"Naw," said the man. "We didn't know nobody to borrow from, so we went out and hocked the wedding ring."

UNUSED TO EVENING DINNER

Grownup Recalls Embarrassing Incident Which Occurred in Her Childhood Days.

As a child in our family I was accustomed to having dinner at noon and a light supper in the evening, because there were several of us, and my mother considered it too harmful to have a heavy meal at night.

We had as a friend a woman who lived several blocks away. One day she called to me as I was returning from school and asked my two brothers and me to come to dinner the next day.

The following day the three of us went to her house at noon. She looked a little surprised as we came, but said nothing. After about a half an hour we wondered when we were to have dinner. She asked me why we were back from school so early that noon.

"We came to dinner," I said.

She smiled and said, "My dear, we have dinner this evening."

I called to my two brothers, and fled in embarrassment.—Exchange.

Fast World.

Children tinkering with wireless telephony and toy moving picture outfits, make us grown-ups realize that we'll have to double our steps to keep pace with the world.

Some nursery movie films are sold as low as a cent a foot. The price ranges up to ten cents a foot for films that can't catch fire or explode.

Do you remember the first movie you saw—how it thrilled you? The scientific marvel of yesterday is the toy of today.

If it keeps on we'll be getting old-fashioned every 24 hours.—Chicago Post.

Right Again.

Jack—Where are you going in such a hurry?

Bill—I want to get a look at Henpeck. The professor told us to describe an atom, the smallest thing in the world.

Jack—Well, why see Henpeck?

Bill—He's the smallest thing in the world when his wife gets through roasting him. I want to get an accurate description of him and palm it off on the professor for the description of an atom.

Ask your druggist for genuine "California Fig Syrup" which has directions for babies and children of all ages printed on bottle. Mother! You must say "California" or you may get an imitation fig syrup.—Advertisement.

Galvanizing Brass and Copper.

Copper and brass may be coated with metallic zinc in the following manner: Place finely divided zinc in a nonmetallic vessel, and cover it with a concentrated solution of sal ammoniac. This is heated to the boiling point, and the copper or brass articles are introduced. A few minutes in the boiling bath will suffice to produce a firm and brilliant covering over the surface of the work. The zinc can be reduced to the requisite fineness by pouring the melted metal into an iron mortar and pounding it with an iron pestle until the solid mass has been granulated to the desired fineness.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

She Knew.

A capable housewife was trying to impress upon her maid the need of system in her work.

After carefully explaining her own methods in her work, she asked: "Now, Olga, just what do I mean by system? Do you understand what system means?"

"Ja, ja," giggled Olga; "seesteen means doin' the hardest way."

HOME BREW, HOOTCH AND MOONSHINE

Good Stuff

This is Home-made whiskey distilled in Boston is harmless is dangerous only in the fact that the State Department of Health have been disappearing with startling regularity. Officials are unable to tell where the samples have gone, but it has been remarked that some of the caretakers have agreed that the home-distilled brand has a kick to it.

Keeping It in the Family

Owing to the slack times in New York City a man keeping a small retail store was forced to go out of business. His brother-in-law is a member of the Prohibition forces cleaning up the big city. The man could make a living and what business he should go into. On the Prohibition officer's advice the merchant became a boot-legger and former customers, who would not buy from him once upon a time, keep him busy day and night filling orders. Where does he get the goods to fill them with? Isn't that a foolish question when it was explicitly stated above that he went into the boot-legging game on his brother-in-law's advice and said brother-in-law belongs to the department enforcing prohibition.

Sook Not Contain

The Circuit Court of Petersburg, Va., has handed down a ruling that will have a far-reaching effect on prohibition enforcement in Virginia. If it is upheld by the higher courts, the decision was to the effect that a citizen has the right to have one quart of real honest-to-goodness liquor in his personal baggage, the prohibition laws to the contrary notwithstanding. However, this ruling did not help the defendant in the case in which it was handed down. He was arrested while carrying a bottle of whiskey wrapped up in a sock. The court held that the sock was not personal baggage and so found him guilty of breaking the law.

Fewer Insane

Dr. Davis Weeks, superintendent of the State Village for Epileptics at Skillman, N. J., and Dr. Henry A. Cotton, medical director of the New Jersey State Hospital for the Insane at Trenton, give it as their opinion that more than a quarter of a century will have to pass before the effects of prohibition, reducing the number of delinquents and delinquents admitted to state institutions, will be apparent. Dr. Cotton also reports that while the number of alcoholic cases admitted to his institution has decreased 10 per cent. to 2 per cent. admission for this type of mental disease have contracted by the fact that the increased greatly during the past few years. He refuses to state whether it is because of prohibition that other and even more dangerous practices have brought about the increase.

Wants a Rebate

An inquiry sent in to a New York City newspaper requested information on an income tax point. The writer said he had purchased three cases of supposed whiskey from a boot-legger, paying $100 per case. He tested a sample and found it good but when the "whiskey" was delivered it was undrinkable. His query asks whether he can deduct this $300 and put it down to profit and loss, when he makes out his next tax return.

Can't Guard Coastline

Dr. Carlos Ruiz of Chile, South America, sees little chance of prohibition enforcement in his country in case the movement spreads to it. He says the coast line of Chile is too long and too rugged to be guarded against rum-runners. His statement arouses another spark of hope in the breasts of Americans who regret prohibition, for a glance at the map and a comparison of the coastline of the United States with that of Chile shows the former to be longer. Dr. Ruiz will serve as counselor to the Chilean Embassy in Washington.

Hootch Prices Lower

Good whiskey has slumped with other commodities, according to reports from New Orleans. And according to the same reports, housewives and heads of families would be happy if the decrease in other commodities were as great as the drop in booze. Good whiskey can be purchased at 55c per case and under and by the single bottle at 55c. Scotch of the best brands sells at 35c by the single bottle and 35c a case. Gin and absinthe are the popular drinks and bring respectively $16 and $20 a gallon.

The liquor traffic in New Orleans has been at the rate of half a million a month during the past year. There is so much of the first class goods of recognized brands on hand that the moonshine product goes begging for customers. The bootlegger has his samples in an office and takes orders with only a little secrecy and attempt to keep his business from the knowledge of the general public. A clientele numbering around 200 allows a dealer to live well, put money in the bank and conduct himself as a model citizen should.

LAND HO!

Synopsis.—Jane Harding, respectable and conservative old spinster—but never too old to think of marriage—with more money than brains, is inveigled by a strong-minded spinster, Miss Higglesby-Browne into financing an expedition to hunt for buried treasure on Leeward Island. Her niece, Virginia Harding, undertaking to stop her, gets on the vessel engaged for the hunt, and in the confusion is unwillingly carried along. By no means concealing her distaste for the expedition and her contempt for its members, Virginia makes the acquaintance of the Honorable Cuthbert Vane, and is somewhat impressed by his explanation of the presence of himself and Shaw.

CHAPTER III.—Continued.

Mr. Shaw looked at me steadily. His eyes were the kind that seem to see all and reveal nothing. I felt a hot spark of defiance rising in my own.

"And indeed it is too bad," he said coolly, "that the trip should not be more to Miss Harding's liking." The rough edges of his Scotch burr had been smoothed down by much wandering, but you knew at once on which side of the Solway he had seen the light.

"It is not a question of my liking," I retorted, trying to preserve an unmovable and lofty demeanor, though my heart was beating rather quickly at finding myself actually crossing swords with the redoubtable adventurer, this man who had often faced death, I could not refuse to believe, as steadily as he was facing me now.

"It is not at all a question of my liking or not liking the trip, but of the trip itself being—quite the wildest thing ever heard of in a story-book."

"Ah—yet the world would be poorer if certain wild trips had not been taken. I seem to remember one Christopher Columbus, for instance."

By a vivid lightning flash of wrath I felt that this adventurer was laughing at me under his sober exterior—even stirring me up as one does an angry kitten.

"Yes," I flared out, "but Columbus did not inveigle a confiding old lady to go along with him!" Of course Aunt Jane is not, properly speaking, an old lady, but it was much more effective to pose her as one for the moment.

It was certainly effective, to judge by the sudden firm setting of his mouth.

"Lad," he said quietly, "lend a hand below, will you? They are overhauling some of our stuff 'tween decks."

He waited until the Honorable Cuthbert, looking rather dazed, had retired. We stood facing each other, my breath coming rather hurriedly.

"Miss Harding," he said slowly, "that was a bitter word you said."

My head went up.

"Bitter, perhaps," I flung back, "but is it not true? It is for you to answer."

"No, it is not for me to answer, because it is not for you to ask. But since you talk of inveigling, let me give you the history of my connection with the expedition. You will understand then that I had nothing to do with organizing it, but was merely engaged to do my best to carry it through to success."

"I have already heard a version of the matter from Mr. Vane."

"And you think he is in the conspiracy, too?"

"Certainly not," I replied hastily. "I mean—of course, I know he told me exactly what he believes himself."

"Then I suppose you consider that he was inveigled, too?"

"I am not required to consider Mr. Vane's status at all," I replied with dignity. "It is my aunt whom I wish to protect." And suddenly to my dismay my voice grew husky. I had to turn my head aside and blink hard at the sea.

He stood looking down at me—he was a big man, though of lesser height than the superb Cuthbert—in a way I couldn't quite understand. And what I don't understand always makes me uncomfortable.

"Very well," he said after a pause. "Maybe your opportunity will come. It would be a pity indeed if Miss Harding were to require no protecting and a young lady here with such a good will to it. But if you will take the suggestion of a man of rather broader experience than your own, you will wait until the occasion arises. It is bad generalship, really, to waste your ammunition like this."

"I dare say I am not a master of strategy," I cried, furious at myself for my moment of weakness and at him for the softening tone which had crept into his voice. "I am merely—honest. And when I see Aunt Jane hypnotized—by this Violet person—"

"And indeed I have seen no reason to think that Miss Higglesby-Browne is not a most excellent lady," interrupted Mr. Shaw stiffly. "And let me say this, Miss Harding: here we are all together, whether we wish to be or no, and for six weeks or more on the island we shall see no faces but our own. Are we to be divided from the beginning by quarrels? Are may-be even the men of us to be set by the ears through the bickering of women?"

Like the flick of a whip came the certainty that he was thinking of the Honorable Cuthbert, and that I was the rock on which their David-and-Jonathan friendship might split. Otherwise I suppose Miss Higglesby-Browne and I might have clawed each other forever without interference from him.

"Really," I said with—I hope—well-simulated scorn, "since I am quite alone against half a dozen of you, I should think you could count on putting down any rebellion on my part very easily. I repeat, I had no other object in coming along—though I was really kidnapped along—than to look after my aunt. As to the treasure, of course I know perfectly well that there isn't any."

And I turned my back and looked steadily out to sea. After a moment or two I heard him turn on his heel and go away. It was none too soon, for I had already begun to feel uncontentedly for my handkerchief. Any way, I had had the last word.

The rest of my day was lonely, for the beautiful youth, probably by malevolent design, was kept busy between decks. Mr. Tubbs danced attendance on Aunt Jane and Miss Brown, so assiduously that I already began to see some of my worst fears realized. There was nothing for me to do but to retire to my berth and peruse a tattered copy of Huckleberry Finn which I found in the cabin.

"But Columbus Did Not Inveigle a Confiding Old Lady to Go Along With Him!"

At dinner, having the Honorable Cuthbert at my elbow, it was easier than not to ignore everyone else. Directly dinner was at an end, remorselessly Captain Magnus led the Honorable Cuthbert away. I retired to Huckleberry Finn. But a face with a scar running to the eyebrow looked up at me from the pages, and I held colloquies with it in which I said all the brilliant and cutting things which had occurred to me too late.

I was thus engaged when a cry rang through the ship: "Land ho!"

CHAPTER IV.

The Isle of Fortune.

I dropped my book and ran on deck. Everyone else was already there. The great gleaming orb of the tropic moon was blinding as the sun. Away to the faint translucent line of the horizon rolled an infinity of shining sea. Straight ahead rose a dark conical mass. It was the mountainous shape of Leeward Island.

Everybody was craning to get a clearer view. "Hail, Isle of Fortune!" exclaimed Miss Brown. I think my aunt would not have been surprised if it had begun to rain doubloons upon the deck.

"I bet we don't put it over some on them original Argonaut fellers, hey?" cried Mr. Tubbs.

Higher and higher across the skyline cut the dark crest of the island as the freighter steamed valiantly ahead. Sheer and formidable from the sea rose a line of black cliffs, and above them a single peak threw its shadow far across the water. Faintly we made out the white line of the breakers foaming at the foot of the cliffs.

We coasted slowly along, looking for the mouth of the little bay. Meanwhile we had collected our belongings, and stood grouped about the deck, ready for the first thrilling plunge into adventure. My aunt and Miss Brown had tied huge green veils over their cork helmets, and were clumping about in tremendous hobnailed boots. All the luggage I was allowed to take was in a traveling bag and a gunny-sack, obligingly donated by the cook. Speaking of cooks, I found we had one of our own, a coal-black negro with grizzled wool, an unctuous voice and the manners of an old-school family retainer. So far as I know his name was Cookie. I suppose he had received another once from his sponsors in baptism, but if so, it was buried in oblivion.

Now a narrow gleaming gap appeared in the wall of cliffs, and the freighter whistled and lay to. There began a bustle at the davits, and shouts of "Lower away!" and for the first time it swept over me that we were to be put ashore in boats. Aunt Jane burst out in lamentation. She would not, could not go in a boat. She had heard all her life that small boats were most unsafe. Why didn't the captain sail right up to the island as she had expected and put us ashore? Even at Panama with only a little way to go she had felt it suicidal—here it was not to be thought of.

But the preparations for this desperate step went on apace, and no one heeded Aunt Jane but Mr. Tubbs, who had hastened to succor beauty in distress.

Then Aunt Jane clutched at Mr. Shaw's coat lapel as he went by, and he stopped long enough to explain patiently that vessels of the freighter's size could not enter the bay, and that there really was no danger, and that Aunt Jane might wait if she liked till the last boat, as it would take several trips to transfer us and our baggage. I supposed of course that this would include me, and stood leaning on the rail, watching the first boat fade to a dark speck on the water, when Mr. Vane appeared at my elbow.

"Ready, Miss Harding? You are to go in the next boat with me. I asked especially."

"Oh, thanks!" I cried fervently. He would be much nicer than Mr. Tubbs to cling to as I went down—indeed, he was so tall that if it were at all a shallow place I might use him as a stepping-stone and survive. I hoped drowning men didn't gurgie very much—meanwhile Mr. Vane had disappeared over the side, and a sailor was lifting me and setting my reluctant feet on the strands of the ladder.

"Good-by, auntie!" I cried, as I began the descent. "Don't blame yourself too much. Everybody has got to go some time, you know, and they say drowning's easy."

With a stifled cry Aunt Jane forsook Mr. Tubbs and flew to the rail. I was already out of reach.

"Oh, Virginia!" she wailed. "Oh, my dear child! If it should be the last parting!"

"Give my jewelry and things to Bess' baby!" I found strength to call back. Then the arms of the Honorable Mr. Vane received me. The strong rowers bent their backs and the boat shot out over the mile or two of bright water between us and the island. Great slow swells lifted us. We dipped with a soothing, cradle-like motion. I forgot to be afraid, in the delight of the warm wind that fanned our cheeks, of the moonbeams that on the crest of every ripple were splintered to a thousand dancing lights. I forgot fear, forgot Miss Higglesby-Browne, forgot the harshness of the Scotch character.

"Oh, glorious, glorious!" I cried to Cuthbert Vane.

"Not so dusty, eh?" he came back in their ridiculous English slang. Now an American would have said: "Some little old moon that!" We certainly have our points of superiority.

All around the island white charging lines of breakers foamed on ragged half-seen reefs. Now our boat felt the lift of the great shoreward rollers, and sprang forward like a living thing. The other boat, empty of all but the rowers and returning from the island to the ship, passed us with a hail. We were in the little bay under the shadow of the frowning cliffs.

At the head of the bay, a quarter of a mile away, lay a broad white beach shining under the moon. At the edge of dark woods beyond a fire burned redly. It threw into relief the black moving shapes of men upon the sand.

Straight for the sand the sailors drove the boat. She struck it with a jar, grinding forward heavily. The men sprang overboard, wading halfway to the waist. And the arms of the Honorable Cuthbert Vane had snatched me up and were bearing me safe and dry to shore.

Mr. Shaw approached and the two men greeted each other in their off-hand British way. As we couldn't well, under the circumstances, maintain a fiction of mutual invisibility, Mr. Shaw, with a certain obvious hesitation, turned to me.

"Only lady passenger, eh? Hope you're not wet through. Cookie's making coffee over yonder."

"I say, Shaw," cried the beautiful youth enthusiastically, "Miss Harding's the most ripping sport, you know! Not the least nervous about the trip, I assure you."

"A close call. Thought one time old Nep had got a strange hold all right."

SOME MORE GOOD THINGS

Sweet potatoes and yams are delicious stuffed and are easily prepared.

Stuffed Sweet Potatoes.—Bake sweet potatoes until tender. Put potatoes through a ricer, add salt, pepper, cream, brown sugar if needed, beaten egg and top with a spoonful of brown sugar. Place in the oven until nicely browned. Serve with a roast fowl.

Cranberry Frappe.—Dissolve a pint of sugar in one quart of water, boil twenty minutes, add one pint of cranberry juice and pulp put through a sieve and freeze as usual. Serve in sherbet cups.

Cheese Salad.—Grate American cheese and mix with cream to the consistency to roll into small balls; add cayenne, paprika and roll into small balls; place on head lettuce and garnish with chopped celery and hard-boiled eggs. Use either mayonnaise or a boiled dressing.

Ginger Snaps.—Take one cupful each of shortening, molasses, brown sugar, two teaspoonfuls of salt, two teaspoonfuls of ginger and flour to roll. Roll out very thin after chilling; use no soda or baking powder. Bake in a moderate oven on well-floured baking sheets.

Pop Corn Cookies.—Beat the whites of two eggs until stiff, add one-half cupful of pulverized sugar and one cupful of finely chopped pop corn mixed with two tablespoonfuls of butter, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt and a teaspoonful of vanilla. Drop by spoonfuls on a buttered sheet, one inch apart. Spread with a spatula dipped in cold water and bake twenty-five to thirty minutes.

Currant Pie.—Put two tablespoonfuls of water into a saucepan with the grated rind and juice of a lemon, one cupful of dried currants, one-half cupful of sugar, one-fourth of a teaspoonful of salt, one-half cupful of molasses and one and one-half cupfuls of water; bring to the boiling point and boil five minutes. Cool and fill a baked crust, decorate with a meringue or marshmallows and brown in the oven.

Vegetable Dinner.—A good dinner is mashed potato, buttered onion, beets, spinach, carrots and lima beans well buttered. All served on the plate, one will never mind having no meat.

The soft-ball stage of cooking is that commonly used for pan candies. Drop a bit in cold water, and if it can be gathered in the fingers into a soft ball it is ready to remove. Work quickly, or turn off the heat, or the sirup in the kettle will be over-cooked while you are experimenting.

Why should the Spirit of Mortal be proud? Like a swift flying meteor, a fast flying cloud Man passes from life to his death in the grave.

OUT OF THE CASSEROLE

Casserole dishes are good for days when one is busy and has no time to watch the cooking of a meal.

Chicken en Casserole.—Cut two chickens as for frying, remove the bones and put the bones into a kettle with one quart of cold water with salt and pepper, one clove of garlic and a diced stalk of celery. Simmer until reduced one-half. Fry the chicken and arrange in the casserole; over this put one cupful of cooked rice, pour in the stock and cook an hour and one-half.

Kidneys and Vermicelli.—Split and skin eight or ten sheep's kidneys and cut in slices, saving a few uncut for the top. Cook a few minutes in butter, add two sliced onions and fry. Add a tablespoonful of stock or water, salt and pepper to taste and stew in the casserole until tender. Place cooked vermicelli over the top of the dish and garnish with the whole kidneys. Reheat and serve very hot from the casserole.

Cauliflower au Gratin.—Cook a large cauliflower until tender in boiling salted water, then drain and dry. Divide into flowerets and place in a well-buttered casserole. Cover with well-seasoned white sauce, sprinkle with one-half cupful of bread crumbs and one-half cupful of cheese mixed together and brown in a hot oven.

Duck en Casserole.—Cut one cooked duck in pieces. Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter and fry the duck in it. Sprinkle with one tablespoonful of flour and brown. Add two cupfuls of stock, one chopped onion, a little parsley, a bay leaf, one teaspoonful of lemon, the same of meat extract and currant jelly, with a few drops of kitchen bouquet.

Buttered Apples.—Peel, core and cut in eighths ten apples, arranging in a baking dish. Add one-half cupful of sugar or honey and one teaspoonful of vanilla. Cover the top with bits of butter, cover and bake until the apples are tender. Decorate with marshmallows and brown. Serve with cream.

TURKEYS ALWAYS TOO FAT

New York Butcher Declared His Customers Were "Stagonized" by the Size of Birds.

The fat butcher was busy arranging Christmas decorations at the back of his counter when a woman asked him what he thought would be the price of Christmas turkeys this year.

"Well, now, you know," he said "that is something I can't tell. It's just according to the demand."

"But say, you should see the people who come in here, strangers, you know, not regular customers, and they say they want a turkey, and I pick one out. They say it is too big, and I say to them: 'Now how heavy a turkey would you like?' They say: 'I don't know, but I'll take that one.'"

"I take that down and it weighs within a few ounces of what the first one weighed, and then they just mutter something and go out again."

"I tell you what it is, madam, they are fair stagonized—stagonized they be."

True, the word is a new one, but it seemed to be adequately expressive of agony and amazement over the staggering price of the festive bird.—New York Sun.

Back Bad Since the Grip?

Has a cold or grip sapped your strength? Do you suffer constant backache, feel nervous and depressed? Then look to your kidneys! Many cases of kidney trouble are the result of infectious disease. The kidneys have broken down under the strain of filtering disease-created poisons from the blood. That's why a cold or grip often leaves backache, headaches, dizzy spells and irregular kidney action. Help your weakened kidneys with Doan's Kidney Pills. Doan's have helped thousands and should help you. Ask your neighbor!

An Illinois Case

YOU PAY LESS

Don't try to save money buying cheap or big-can Baking Powders. You can't do it. You'll throw out more in spoiled bakings than you save on price of the powder. And don't think that old style high priced powders are best because they cost most. They are not.

CALUMET BAKING POWDER

has proved in millions of bake-day tests that it is the best baking powder ever made—that's why it is the biggest selling baking powder in the world today. No other baking powder makes such temptingly good—tender, wholesome bakings. No baking powder of anywhere near the same quality is sold at such a low price.

You use less of Calumet—because it is the highest grade baking powder. One teaspoonful is equal to two teaspoonfuls of many other brands. And there is no "luck" about it when you use Calumet. I. C. COPLEY IN CONGRESSIONAL RACE AGAIN

Congressman Ira C. Copley has announced his candidacy for re-election for Congress from the Eleventh Illinois Congressional District at the primaries of April 11th.

Congressman Copley is now serving his sixth term in Congress. He is fifth ranking member of the important Ways and Means Committee of the House. His record in Congress will be the only platform that Congressman Copley will submit to the voters of this district, according to his statement. Congressman Copley worked on framing the Fordney tariff bill and at the present time he is about to enter the congressional lists, he is working with his committee on the soldiers' adjusted compensation bill.

Less in the public eye, perhaps, but of at least importance in his work for the service men has been the care of Congressman Copley for the wounded and disabled veterans in his district.

By his experience and seniority Congressman Copley has come to be regarded as a leader in the House of Representatives and as an authority on revenue and economic legislation and throughout his district his constituents know that in him they always have a friend "at court."

Plain Diction.

"Your constituents say you don't use classical English."

"That's the way I want them to feel about it," answered Senator Sorghum. "When we eat together I want them to realize that the object of the meeting is to talk business and not to organize a literary society."

Easily Figured.

Nip—What's the difference between a dance and a dawnee?
Tuck—About four bucks.

A nuisance and a man with a grievance are much the same.

Cuticura for Sore Hands.

Sore hands on retiring in the hot sud of Cuticura Soap, dry and rub in Cuticura Ointment. Remove surplus Ointment with tissue paper. This is only one of the things Cuticura will do. Soap, Ointment and Talcum are used for all toilet purposes.—Advertisement.

Many a man's cowardice has kept him from getting in bad.

HIS CAR

"I suppose you get a great deal of pleasure out of your car?"
"No, I can't say that I do."
"What's the trouble?"
"The car's all right, but Monday is mother's day to drive it; on Tuesday, the girls want it; Wednesday, I promised to let the boy have it, and Friday and Saturday it has to go in for repairs. Sunday, if I am very good, they let me drive myself."

Slightly Accommodating.

"Your daughter seems to be a strictly modern miss."
"She makes some concessions to old-fashioned ideas," said Mr. Dubwaite.

"How is that?"

"She occasionally permits me to meet some of the young men she runs around with."

Fluency No Advantage.

"Do you speak any foreign language fluently?"

"Not fluently," replied Senator Sorghum. "I find it better to slow down the conversation as much as possible, so I can take time to think things over before committing myself."

Hours and Minutes.

"Your constituents regard you as the man of the hour, do they not?"
"They used to," replied Senator Sorghum. "But at present I'm lucky if they stand for a twenty-minute speech."

Johnny's Raw Joke.

Big Sister—Now, Johnny, we're going to have my gentleman friend to dinner and I want you to eat at the second table.

Johnny—I'd just as soon. Pa says he ain't half-baked, anyway.

Personal Property.

"I am entitled to my own opinions," remarked the positive man.
"Then," murmured Miss Cayenne, "why scatter them about as if you didn't value them?"

TAKING PRECAUTIONS

The Trusting Bride-Elect: Don't you think you'd better engage some plain clothes detectives to see that none of your friends lift any of our wedding presents?

The Happy Man: Sure! And you notify your kid brother that he'll have to give a surety bond before he can act as ring bearer.

Some Little Help.

I cannot answer questions deep. But while from such a task I shrink, I can at a silence keep And let the real people think.

Good Old Days.

"Do you think we are getting back to the good old days?"

"There isn't a doubt of it," replied Senator Sorghum. "People are going into print with perfect confidence with the same old anecdotes that made me laugh in early childhood."

Giving Her Time.

He—Will you—er—that is, I want to ask—
She—Oh, this is so sudden!
He—Don't get excited, please. I am making it just as slow as I can.

True, Indeed.

Mason—Do you believe in patriotism?
Russell—Oh, yes, patriotism is all right, but so many people mix politics with their patriotism.—Answers.

Giving Him Publicity.

Ethel—Stella is awfully affectionate at times.
Clara—Goodness, yes! She even kisses her husband in public.

Expert Testimony.

Ted—Tom claims to be quite a golf player. What do you think?
Ned—I'd rather wait until I hear what his caddy says.

Ready to Substitute!

She—I'm just going to hug the fire-place when we get in the parlor!
He—Why do that? I'm a brick!—Wayside Tales.

All-Day Session.

"There's a man from Florida I want to talk business to, but I'll have to put it off until tomorrow."

"What's the trouble?"

"He has just met a chap from California and they're arguing about climate."

Not Uncommon.

"I don't see how actors can simulate a laugh so heartily."
"Nonsense. Don't we do it every day at funny stories we have heard a dozen times?"

CONCERN WAS FOR MOTHER

Of Course Little Frank Was Not the Least Bit Afraid of the Darkness.

The family has moved from a gas-lighted house to one where there is electricity, and baby Frank, standing on tip toe, can just reach the two push buttons inside the rooms. They are a source of great amusement and he never fails to press them whenever he passes.

A few nights ago his mother came from the upper rooms and announced bedtime. Little Florence ran upstairs immediately. Frank, up to his usual tricks, pushed the button, and off went the light. The overwhelming darkness frightened the little fellow. After a minute he asked: "Mother, are you there?" "Yes, dear," said his amused mother. Another pause. "Mother, are you 'fraid?"

"No, dear, are you?"
"No, I ain't 'fraid, but you better put the light on. I'm 'fraid you will be 'fraid."

True Enough.

"Why is the kaiser so vehement in declaring he didn't start the war?"
"Nobody likes to take credit for a losing venture."

Getting high up on the social ladder is a career in itself.

Love's young dream has been known to develop into insomnia.

Destiny.

Pat Murphy was a great favorite in the works. Even the master would sometimes stop and crack a joke with him.

One day the boss met Pat. "Morning, Pat!" he said. "I hear that lately you've taken quite a fancy for the girls."

Pat blushed and sniggered. "Have you not met your fate yet?" asked the master.

"Sure and begorra, sir," exclaimed Pat sadly, "I met one of her father's fate last night!"

Leave It to Her.

Sultor—I will admit I haven't always lived as I should, but I do love your daughter sincerely, and if ever I should make her unhappy, I hope I will be made to suffer for it.

Father—Don't let that worry you; she'll attend to that.

Most men who threaten to bring a lawsuit know all the time that they won't.

A Sure Remedy.

A certain young doctor will have to improve his methods or he will never have enough patients to maintain himself. A woman came in to see him a few days ago. She looked haggard and pale.

"What, madam?" he said, "what is it?"

"I'm troubled with insomnia," she sighed. "What shall I do for it?"

"Sleep it off, madam; sleep it off," he advised.

Rapid Thinking.

"When you find something that meets your approval in a magazine or book do you read it aloud to Mrs. Peckton?"

"Not always," said Mr. Peckton. "For instance, last night, I was reading an article in a magazine in which the writer stated that woman's place is in the home. I exclaimed, 'That's good!' Mrs. Peckton wanted to know what was good. The result was I had to think rapidly and quote an old joke from memory."

Same Symptoms.

Simpson (greeting his old friend)—Why, Jones, it's ages since I saw you last. Married now, aren't you?

Jones—No, no, old man, it's not that. Just business worry and nerves.

Defective hammocks have caused many fond lovers to fall out.

To win a race a Jockey doesn't put extra weight on the horse that helps him succeed

No man or woman who wants to succeed in the race of life can afford the handicap of headaches, insomnia, indigestion and debility. Nor can they afford to take anything that may keep up a continual irritation of the nervous system.

Yet this is what many people do who drink excessive amounts of tea or coffee. For tea and coffee contain caffeine, a substance that is sometimes very injurious. Many doctors say that caffeine raises the blood pressure, irritates the kidneys, and over-stimulates the entire nervous system. Also that it is especially bad for growing children, or for any one who has any tendency to nervousness or insomnia.

If you want to avoid a possible cause of headache, insomnia, or nervousness, it might be well to stop taking tea and coffee for awhile, and drink rich, satisfying Postum, instead.

Postum is a delicately-roasted, pure cereal beverage—delicious and wholesome.

Order Postum from your grocer today. Drink this fragrant, healthful beverage for awhile, and see if you will not feel brighter, more active, and more resistant to fatigue—as so many thousands of others have felt.

Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.
